Abstract

Sanction is a kind of punishment for crimes with no considered atonement or limit in the sharia. Vehicles become important and necessary in today's world and have some disadvantages besides their benefits. Driving accidents are the most important disadvantages that have unpleasant personal and social consequences. Sanction punishments considered by the law for driving crimes include imprisonment, driving ban, pay fines, revocation of the license, etc. Islamic jurists have addressed the issue of sanctions for driving crimes just in a general way. However, both public law and Islamic law agree that Islamic governor is responsible for determining the type of sanction fine and its amount according to the interests of the society. The law has established some fines for driving crimes, but Islamic jurisprudence has addressed the sanction and Islamic rules related to it before the state law.
